A shrewd yankee sent a circular to the Louisiana board of leves commissioners. We extract the pith of the matter, but don't know whether the honorable gentleman sent any funds:

As Nosh built the ark, and saved himself and family during the flood—so it seems to be the will of God to have a house built of fire-proof and bricks—the fire-proof to be twelve or fifteen yards thick, and twenty yards thekness of brick both inside and outside, to thirty-six miles square.

The committee reported as follows:
Your committee, appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the object and sense of this convention, beg leave to

The president of the City National ense of this convention, beg leave to The president of the City National bank of New Orleans which was amounced as having suspended, has con-

able to cover all the ground necessary to place the steamboat interest and its emplayers in that position to which com-mon justice entitles them, still there are mon justice entitles them, still there are points at issue as between the shipper and carrier and between the government for more properly the laws in force representing the government, that weigh heavily upon the steamboat interest and goes far toward depriving the owner of a reasonable return on the instrument thus made. And this is not all; some of the laws now in force in relation to quying tion are of such a character as to be perfectly impracticable in their workings in connection with high pressure river navigation; your committee would therefore offer the following resolutions:

Our spaces is too limited to give the resolution which followed in full, so we condense from the Times;

The first resolution condemns the present laws governing inland navigation, they having been framed with a view to seagoing vessels, and recommends that new laws be enacted suited to the necessities of our rivers and inland seas, and more particularly to high pressure boilers and machinery.

The weather is very fine, and all the upper rivers tend steadily downward. A towboat, the Imperial, brought in yesterday from the Minnesota river, with three barges, 21,000 bushels wheat in bulk, and 5000 sacks. We learn from a pretty reliable source, that the wheat was a purchase by the owners of the boat and barges, the transaction netting them a profit of one dollar per bushel.
